Meningitis death; not contagious

Terry Lee Maglone, 1727 Maple St., seven weeks old, infant, died of non-contagious meningitis Monday, according to a report of an autopsy.

The baby was taken from his home by ambulance to St. Elizabeth Hospital, where he was pronounced dead upon arrival.

He was born on July 24 at the local hospital.

Following the baby's death, health officers had the house closed for further investigation until the cause of death could be established.

Trees need extra water

Ornamental Horticulturist
A little extra water is the getra some gardeners use to guarantee good tree growth and survival.
Young trees are trying to make a little extra growth before fall, but wilting and leaf burn is occurring because of the dry weather. Root development is a vital function of all trees during the fall, and especially important when recently adequate fertilizer for young trees, now top off your tree care program with extra watering. Filling the soil depression around the tree or a slow trickling hose is beneficial, but the best watering is deep saking of the lawn area surrounding the tree.

New developing roots are encouraged by this unlimited water supply and the soaking carries some of the lawn fertilizer to the root zone where the tree gets a share. Extra care will pay big dividends next spring when your pet tree makes the extra growth or produces those extra flowers.

"The taxpayers of Illinois are not the only citizens victimized by fraud, in the public aid system," Thompson said.
"Welfare recipients who genuinely desire to become self-sufficient and end their dependency upon the state are also victimized by deception in the system.

also victimized by deception in the system.
"We must stop the political Thetoric about 'welfare cheaters' and 'free handouts' and start developing sound management policies and new approaches to meet the problems of public aid."
Thompson's plan contains five major areas, including:

(1) New methods to protect Illinois from losing federal funds. (2) Professionalizing operations of the Illinois Department of Public Aid (IDPA).

(3) A six-point program to deal with welfare fraud. (4) Improved vocational training and effective job training and effective job placement.

(5) Increased consideration of the human, legal and political rights of welfare recipients. Thompson described a "grave fiscal problem" resulting from withholding of funds by the federal government when state agencies fail to comply with federal regulations. The federal government has sought reimbursement of $188 and the sought reimbursement of $180 paid to Illinois; another $21 million has been withheld and about $56 million is being deferred pending further review, he said. In order to resolve this problem, Thompson called for problem, Thompson called for lillinois' Washington office; regular-meetings between the Washington staff and the Illinois Congressional delegation to insure that legislative initiatives do not, inadvertently, have adverse impact on Illinois; the IDPA to be given power to comple office departments through which at administers federal funds to comply with federal regulations; and selection of onsight supervision of other departments to implement the authority.

Thompson indicated that another position paper will be issued during the campaign dealing with Medicaid fraud by health service providers. Thompson and Thompson and all the control of th

Airport can spur symmetrical growth around St. Louis, not a lopsided region denying an active role for Illinois

linois Press Association lational Newspaper Associat International Conference of Weekly Newspaper Editors

The 15-4 decision by the 49-member Downtown St. Louis board favoring Transportation Secretary William Coleman's Sept. 1 airport decision is encouraging.

We hope it leads to a rapidly-growing base of support among St. Louisans and St. Louis Countyans, because bi-state agreement is the key to prompt implementation of the airport recomplementation of the airport recom-mendations.

Lambert Airport in north St. Louis County is handler to the Quad-Cities than is the scheduled Columbia-Waterloo, Ill., site. But this community and others throughout the bi-state area would be harmed from economic and safety standpoints by con-tinuing inaction regarding hemmed-in Lambert.

Lambert in the properties and intanglible ways, the metropolitan region is going to be hurt in competition with other regions unless it provides modern, spacious facilities for the never-routine science and art of transporting travelers through the skies.

We recall a conversation with perhaps the most influential man in this region. He was a bit perplexed why Illinoisans sometimes stubbornly disagreed with policies developed in Missouri. Conceding that no one is perfect, we commented that occasionally Illinoisans just might have the right answer, and to circumsent their sound proposals could hurt everyone in the region.

Renewed realization of the in-terdependence of the entire area is implied by the Downtown St. Louis group's stand this week. While Mr. Coleman's decision this week. While Mr. Coleman's decision eventually may lead to airlines landing only in Illinois, Lambert can have a major role in general aviation. An air terminal is likely in the city of St. Louis. And the typical 'wagon wheel' growth around the region's nucleus can resume along all spokes, not just those labeled 'Missouri.'

Court files may temporarily disappear, but effective steps are taken to assure impartial coverage of news

A letter today objects to the reporting of divorces. It suggests there is sensational emphasis on negative news, and alleges favoritism and exploitation.

The Pres-Record reports vastly more positive news developments than topics that might be called negative; any issue of the paper selected at random would bear this out.

There are some articles that create no joy There are some articles that create no joy in us but that are an obligation — a duty that must be performed. They are not presented to embarrass or exploit, but because an informed citizenry is essential if democracy is to function. Thomas Jefferson, among others, had a lot to say along this same line of thought.

It might surprise some readers to know that nearly every type of news item at some time or another has been challenged as unnecessary or detrimental. Even the reporting of murders has led to angry calls from families opposing disclosure that one of their loved ones was being prosecuted. While a news occurrence obviously affects one or more individuals more intensely than others, it often also has an impact on countless other persons. This is 'the other side of the coin' that must be considered. An obvious illustration is when a molester that are an obligati

State hoping for more return on federal taxes

By LESTER BELL Press-Record Washington Bureau

Gov. Daniel Walker in the remainder of his term wants to work with the Illinois Congressional delegation for a better return on federal tax revenues generated within the state.

Walker told the delegation last week that Illinois got back only 72 cents out of every federal tax dollar in fiscal year 1975.

"Frankly, we're hurting," he said at a huncheon meeting on Capitol Hill.
Walker said there is a disparity between "federal disparity between the upper highest states and the "purbell" states of the South and West which get a bigger return on the money they send to Washington.

Walker used welfare payments as one example of inequity in federal feedback.

He said the high welfare payments in Illinois attract residents of other states which pay less.

"The more we pay them, the less we get back from the federal government. I don't think that's fair.

It is a state of the state o

The senator conceded that Illinois loses more than $100 million a year on the revenue sharing formula, but he said the delegation is "handicapped" in getting that changed because "There's no easy arswer except to continue fighting," he said.

Walker said he would be "hesitant" to tamper with the revenue sharing formula because that conceivably could "pit region against region," yo, soliciting Walker's recommendations, asked if he would "nationalize welfare." Walker said this had "some pitfalish that it might be better to avoid. Steverson said he would not hesitate to federalize the welfare program.
